Language is a medium through which all the development in the human world take place. The development of all the languages of the world is not the same. Some languages are well developed due to advancement of the linguistic community in the field of economics, culture, society, religion, science and politics, but some languages still needed to be developed in their scripts.

ଈ(ଠ)ନୈ-

Like all human institutions, the language also changes, dies, grows and expands. For its expansion, special care is needed, as we care for our gardens to grow and blossom. But if it is not in use for a generation it will die out. Language can be used in two different ways for the purpose of communication. It can be speech/spoken form or in written form. The medium of speech/spoken is more important than the medium of writing as it comes first with the evolution of the language community.
