Plastic has long been with us. It became well-known in the 1930's and particularly the 1940's through a great deal of publicity, as a major substitute for other materials. Since then—with far less fanfare—it has steadily increased its influence over our lives. The basic raw materials for the manufacture of plastic are petroleum and natural gas, but plastic can also be made from coal or—if need be—even from wood. These hydrocarbon materials are processed into a waxy, mouldable (hence the word 'plastic') stuff called rexin.

Environmentally, plastics have a good deal to recommend them. Plastic requires only one-tenth of the energy required to produce aluminium, and in spite of the enormous volume involved, plastic accounts for only five percent of US petroleum consumption. But, plastic also present some special problems. Although the basic resin-manufacturing process presents a much cleaner face than a steel mill (little soot and smoke), it is also true that many of the ingredients are dangerous. Benzene, for example, which goes into the manufacture of styrene, epoxy, polyester and nylon, is a member of the dangerous family of carcinogens. Common types of plastic produce toxic gases in fire, including hydrogen cyanide and hydrogen chloride. The plastic industry counter-argues that natural materials such as wood also produce toxic gases when burned, and that non-plastics may be more prone to catching fire or starting fires (as in the case of metal electrical housings).

12. Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow :

The epitome of the Renaissance Man, Leonardo da Vinci, was born on 15th April, 1452, in Vinci, just outside Florence in Italy.

Growing up in his father's Vinci home, Leonardo had access to scholarly texts owned by family and friends. He was exposed to Vinci's longstanding painting tradition. Young Leonardo rapidly advanced socially and intellectually. He was handsome, persuasive in conversation, and a fine musician and improviser. When he was about fifteen, his father apprenticed him to the renowned workshop of the painter and sculptor, Andrea del Verrocchio, in Florence. In Verrocchio's workshop, Leonardo was introduced to many activities, from painting of altar pieces and panel pictures to the creation of large sculptural projects in marble and bronze. Even as an apprentice, Leonardo demonstrated his colossal talent. Indeed, his genius seems to have seeped into a number of pieces produced by Verrocchio's workshop from the period 1470 to 1475. For example, one of Leonardo's first big break was to paint an angel in Verrocchio's 'Baptism of Christ', and Leonardo was so much better than his master that Verrocchio allegedly resolved never to paint again.
